

Stop procrastinating on veterinary union idea

Dear editor,

Is anyone else getting tired of the continued bleating about the subject of a veterinary union? If it is such a brilliant idea, why don't those who promote it stop procrastinating, as they accuse the current representative bodies of the veterinary profession of doing, and get on and do it? If it is a wonderful idea, it will thrive and grow – as the BSAVA has since its fledgling years. Remember that, at the time, it too was perceived by many as unnecessary. If a union proves not to be a good idea, it will wither on the vine.

Yours faithfully,

JOHN DALTON, BVMS, MRCVS,
BSAVA past-president,
Avon House, Middle Woodford,
Salisbury, Wilts SP4 6NR.

VT 39(13):43

6/4/09